Antenna Farm Construction May Impact Pedestrians

Construction of a cellular antenna farm atop the parking structure at Asante Rogue Regional Medical Center may have impacts on foot traffic near the structure. Pedestrians are being advised to follow flaggers' instructions while walking in the area.

The antenna farm – the first at Asante Rogue Regional – is being built to improve cellular service on the hospital campus and in surrounding neighborhoods. The construction project is expected to continue for eight or nine weeks.

Some parking spaces near the structure's south entrance will be blocked off to allow for storage of construction material and equipment. Foot traffic entering and leaving the parking structure's north and south entries may occasionally be impacted by the project.
